Innovation in Delivering Care

The COVID-19 pandemic has led to innovations in secure, effective and readily-available virtual counselling/psychotherapy services. 88%⁴ of surveyed therapists indicated that they had received training and support in online service delivery. This means that their services and support are available anywhere at any time from a phone, laptop or other electronic devices.

Access to Care

Counselling is the Most Prevalent But Least Likely Fulfilled Need of the 4 types of mental health care needs identified in the 2012 Canadian Community Health Survey.⁵ Counsellors and psychotherapists are in a position to assist in reversing this trend.

Wait Times for Mental Health Services are a Major Problem in Canada causing potentially negative consequences for those seeking help. Expanding services to include counsellors and psychotherapists results in greater access to much needed mental health care and in turn a reduction in wait times.

It is Critical to Utilize the Most Appropriately Trained Mental Health Professionals either as individual practitioners or as members of multi-disciplinary teams. The role of counsellors and psychotherapists is complementary to the work of other service providers. Including this resource in the continuum of care helps address the shortage, growing demand and increasing cost of mental health services.

Counsellors and psychotherapists provide one of the most cost-effective mental health services available at a typical range of $70 - $150 per session.*

*Fee range is affected by region and clientele.

Ready to address the needs of today's diverse workforce, counsellors and psychotherapists are trained to deliver culturally appropriate services.
